I believe any, and all genuine efforts of giving in all its various facets, whether its winter attire, and providing housing for the many homeless women and men of many communities, to providing toys for deprived and unfortunate children of many various communities, giving in all its forms can only serve to perpetuate a continuing vitality and vibrant sustainable community. I applaud and commend efforts of charity, and all efforts true giving...

I only hope we can always... think of others...and diminish selfishness

I agree, @Jason Sandifer. It's important to recognize that the world is bigger than just our own individual lives - every little bit counts.

Thank you very much for your comment, I appreciate it, and it is very true that this world is bigger than our individual lives, and every bit indeed does count, well said..., I believe that our lives should be a eternal endowment to others as we live..., and as we live... we can live for another...
